Beat half the white of an egg and add to the sugar before it grows warm. Watch carefully and when it is just ready to run over take it off the fire and pour in a table-spoonful of cold water. After the ebullition ceases put it on the fire again. Re-peat this three times and after the third tablespoonful of water is poured in let it settle. Remove the scum and strain the syrup through a jelly bag. It will be as clear as crystal. This rule can, of course, be used in making syrup for any fruit. Now add the peaches to the syrup in the proportion of threequarters of a pound of fruit to a pound of sugar and boll till soft, which will
